

Animal Designing Exercise

Your task is to design a home for one of the following animals, A rabbit, hamster or a Guinea pig.

You must consider the following things as research in your answer before going any further.

The living requirements of the animal.

The suitability of the materials used to build it.

Cleaning and maintaining the animals home.

The comfort of the animal.

You should next write down a Specification for the animal home, (what the animal home must actually do), before finally designing your animal house.

Your design for the animal house should consider all the things you have noted in the first two parts of this exercise before starting your design. You should make notes on your design to show what the features are which makes it easier for other people to understand your ideas.
